WOMAN'S WORLD.

A PROGRESSIVE AND AGGRESSIVE WOMAN'S CLUB OF CHICAGO.

Will Appoint Women—The Queen at Manchester—Dr. Flora A. Brewster—National Council of Women—Women's Affairs in England—A Successful Business Woman

The most progressive and aggressive body of women in the United States is probably the Chicago Woman's club. It would be no easy task to enumerate all the worthy reforms which have originated in this club and have been successfully carried out by committees of energetic women. The Chicago university is the only one in the history of the world that included in its very conception the equal educational rights and privileges of women. Two dormitory halls, presided over by women, provide respectively a home for 200 girls. One of these was created by women for women and is, as far as known, the only one of the kind. It is the gift of the women of Chicago at a cost of $280,000. The fund was raised largely through the editorial efforts of Mrs. Margaret F. Sullivan of the Chicago Herald, who showed, in able articles, what large sums women in all ages had given to help support men's colleges, while women's colleges were often badly crippled for need of money. The club was responsive to Mrs. Sullivan's appeals, the president heading the list with $1,000, and in less than two weeks the funds were raised for the erection and equipment of the splendid structure. One of the most important steps achieved by the Chicago club is the appointment of women on the Chicago school board. Mrs. Lucy L. Flower's term is not yet expired, but she has done such satisfactory work that another woman, Mrs. Caroline K. Sherman, has been appointed lately. Mrs. Flower is considered the best representative of the working element for the club, having been for many years at the head of the reform committee. Being a teacher before she was married, and coming from the east, where women on the school boards are taken as a matter of fact, Mrs. Flower was well equipped for her work in the public schools. Brooklyn Eagle.

Will Appoint Women.
Mayor Schieren announced the other day that he would appoint several women as members of the Brooklyn board of education next year, but that he could not make such appointments this year because he had selected 15 men to fill the vacancies which occurred on July 1 before he received the petition of the women to have their sex represented. He said:

"I am sorry to say that I am so placed now that I cannot comply with the request of the ladies. I would like to do so, but the list of 15 members of the board is selected. I think women should be represented in the board of education. Questions arise there which a woman seems to have a natural intuition to judge as to their practicability or impracticability. This is especially true as to the studies of children. I believe that some of these studies are entirely too severe for the age of childhood. I believe that women—mothers—are more apt to judge the capacity of children. Men are apt to overwork the children. They expect too much from them. I have conversed with several of the women teachers, and they are heartily in favor of the change."

"The constitutional convention should be petitioned by the women to pass a resolution making it mandatory upon mayors or commissioners, as the case may be, to appoint at least one-third women on any board of education. For some reason which I cannot understand the impression has gone out that I have been opposed to the appointment of women. Such an impression could not have had its origin from anything I have said on the subject. I have always held the ideas I now proclaim."—Brooklyn Times.

The Queen at Manchester.
Imagine a short, only a little over 5 feet, rather stout woman, with a face, while not possessing the least sign of what we should call beauty, but still showing a degree of determination and will power apparent to all, her body incased in a plain dress of black silk and her head encircled with a bonnet, very plain in appearance, and you have as correct a description as it lies in my power to give of the lady whose power stretches over thousands of miles and whose word is law to millions.

The first appearance of the queen in the open street was the signal for a remarkable demonstration of affection and enthusiasm on the part of the assembled multitude. Loud cheers rent the air, hats and handkerchiefs were waved, and from everywhere came cries of welcome. Her majesty appeared greatly touched by the heartiness of the reception accorded her, and which she acknowledged by frequent bows to the right and left, each one of these being the signal for another outburst of cheering. At this point I could not fail to mark the healthy appearance that her majesty presented. She seemed entirely recovered from her long and dusty ride in the close railway carriage, and her cheeks showed a color that many a younger woman would have envied. As the carriage ride increased in distance her affability was more plainly shown by numerous bows right and left. Manchester Letter.

Dr. Flora A. Brewster.
Dr. Flora A. Brewster of Baltimore has won an honorable and successful place in the profession by persistent hard work. For nearly 10 years she taught school in Pennsylvania, contributing to the support of her relatives and pursuing studies which enabled her to graduate from the state normal school at Mansfield. In 1878 she went to Chicago and took the editorial management of The Newboys' Appeal, an illustrated journal, published in the interests of the Newboys' home. The next year she began to study medicine with

SUMMER AFTERNOON COWNS.

The figure on the left represents a gown of figured goblin blue china silk with cream stars. The bodice is trimmed with white lace. There is a shirred Spanish flounce at the bottom. The gown on the right is of white serge with white lace laid over narrow ribbon. The double-bowed sash is of broad ribbon, mauve and cream. There is a wide bertha and a guimpe of white china silk.

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith of Chicago, at the same time conducting a night school in the Newsboys' home. In 1882 she completed the course in the Chicago Homeopathic Medical college, went to Baltimore and opened an office. She acquired a large practice during the next four years and then entered into partnership with her sister, Dr. Cora Belle Brewster. In 1889 they began the publication of the Baltimore Family Health Journal, which two years later was changed to The Homeopathic Advocate and Health Journal and was made a hospital journal. In 1890 Dr. Brewster was elected surgeon and gave clinics in the new Homeopathic hospital in Baltimore. Last year she dissolved partnership with her sister and opened a sanitarium for the medical and surgical treatment of women, which is proving a marked success. Baltimore Letter.

National Council of Women.
The time is now fixed for the convention of the national council of women of the United States. It is for February, 1895, and is to be held in Washington. There are now 17 national associations belonging to the council, which represents a constituency of about 700,000 women. The executive committee of the council has passed resolutions on the subject of dress reform, favoring patriotic instruction, divorce reform and an equal standard of morality for men and women. The resolution on divorce reform reads:

Resolved, That as divorce is a measure equally concerning both sexes, we hold it just that all commissions created to deal with divorce should be representative of both. To this end, we, an organization of national organizations comprising about 700,000 representative women, request of the appointing power in each state, whether gubernatorial or legislative, that all such commissions hereafter to be appointed shall be composed of both men and women in equal numbers.

That we ask the National Divorce Reform league to take no steps toward altering existing laws without conferring with the national council of women of the United States through its standing committee on divorce reform.

That we instruct our committee on divorce reform to ask for a hearing before the Divorce Reform league at its next meeting in order to provide for operation between men and women in regard to this measure, which equally affects both.

That the first step toward the elevation of the home is to put man and woman as homemakers in a position of legal equality.

That a letter be sent to the governor of each state and territory, asking him to call the attention of the legislature to the situation concerning divorce laws, requesting the appointment of a commission to consider the matter, to consist equally of men and women.

Women's Affairs in England.
Although Miss Johnson has beaten all her male competitors in this year's mathematical tripos at Cambridge, the general work of improving the higher education of women appears to be in a bad way, owing mainly, it is stated, to the indifference of those directly concerned. The Association of Women Lecturers particularly is on the verge of bankruptcy and will cease to exist unless its patrons subscribe a certain sum of money. The association has been patronized by aristocratic faddists to an extent, but the interest in its doings rapidly vanishes when a call for cash is made. On the other hand, women politicians have plenty of funds and were never more active than now. Many big meetings have been held in London and the provinces, which must have cost a lot of money, the largest gathering of the series having taken place at St. James' hall under the presidency of the Countess of Carlisle, who is probably the ablest woman in public life in this country. This activity is due to the belief in an early general election, because there is no immediate need to bring pressure to bear on the House of Commons, the hope of introducing a female suffrage bill at this session having been abandoned. London Queen.

A Successful Business Woman.
Mrs. Zulme E. Hearsey of Baton Rouge is one of the most successful business women in her state. Belonging both by birth and marriage to distinguished and wealthy families, she enjoyed the numerous educational and social advantages that were lavished 40 years ago upon southern young women in her station. After the close of the war, her husband being an invalid, Mrs. Hearsey opened a large bookstore, which at once sprung into popular favor and today is the recognized headquarters for all standard publications as well as the rendezvous of all book lovers and litterateurs. She possesses the confidence of the entire community and has controlled the sale of the New Orleans papers in Baton Rouge for years. She employs a force of 30 newsboys, and her second son, Gaston Hearsey, has been her assistant for several years. She also manages a large floriculture trade, and the roses and camellias raised in her gardens are known all over the south. Her florist's business is scarcely less profitable than her news and bookstore. Baton Rouge (La.) Letter.

Cigarettes in High Society.
At the woman writers' dinner in London America was well represented. Mrs. Poulteney Bigelow is described as being "magnificent in palest green, set off by some emerald velvet arrangement on her shoulders." Everybody who has read "A Yellow Aster" will be interested to know that at this dinner the author, who has been christened with the title of her book as a nickname, was quite beautifully dressed. "You only saw films of white lace as she sat half hidden behind the flowers. It was as when the autumn mists fall on the asters, and the oriental pearls round her neck made one think of the gossamer with strings of dew pearls that cling so often around the flower of that lady's choice. But when you saw the Yellow Aster take the lead in lighting a cigarette then comparisons failed you." London Correspondent.

The Lady of Governor's Island.
Mrs. Miles, wife of Major General Nelson Miles, who will succeed General O. O. Howard in command of the department of the east, with headquarters on Governor's Island, is a handsome and very charming woman, and as the leader of army society in this vicinity she will give a life to it that it has not had for some time. She is related to Mrs. Cameron, wife of the senator from Pennsylvania, and has a lovely daughter. The two will no doubt make Governor's Island a rendezvous for many well known society people. Mrs. Miles has seen life on the frontier, and some of the most interesting women are those who have had such experiences. New York Journal.

Julia Ward Howe.
Few of the people who saw the Boston poet, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, on the platform with Dr. Dewey at the dedication of the Columbus statue in Central park would have said that she looked like a woman of 75. She has the presence, the demeanor, the expression, the voice and the step of 50, she has a handsome face, is in vigorous health, gives heed to the art of dress, she is far more lively than are most women at her time of life, yet she has been writing poetry for nearly 60 years—the poetry of beauty and of nature and of the emotions and of freedom. New York Sun.

Mrs. Mackay's Latest Ball.
Mrs. Mackay's latest ball in London is described as a great success. Everybody who is anybody in the London world was there. The Hungarian band played at the foot of the marble staircase in a bower of palms, and up stairs Mrs. Mackay, gowned in plain black velvet, with no other adornment than her splendid pearls, received with her young son. Young Lady Craven was present, lovely in white satin and silver, but Mrs. Walter Winans, the wife of the great American pistol shot, was accredited the best looking woman in the room and was simply attired in pearl white satin.
